Euchre Club.

Miss Ella Pendleton entertains the Euchre Club Thursday afternoon at her home, on College street.

Informal Entertainment.

Mrs. John Reese entertained informally Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. James Madison Jackson, of Parkersburg, W. Va.

"Forty-two."

Mrs. John M. Hodgkin entertained a few friends at "Forty-two" Wednesday afternoon in a most inimitable way. The house was simply, yet beautifully, decorated with ferns, palms and autumn leaves.

There were eight tables, and the guests played until a late hour, when an elegant meat course was served.

The charming hostess was assisted in attending to the wants of the guests by Mrs. L. Hampton Bush and Mrs. Henry Phillips, and they, by their attractive and charming manner, left not a thing undone to add to the pleasure of those present.

All were sorry when the dusk of evening came, and they must depart to their separate homes for pleasures past can never be recalled.

Beautiful Entertainment.

"Lakeland," the palatial country home of Mrs. George Proctor, was magnificent in its decorations of holly mistletoe and autumn leaves, when Mrs. Proctor and Mrs. Will Robb entertained a number of their friends at "Forty-two," in honor of Mrs. Reuben Brazzell, of Missouri.

The drawing room mantel was banked with holly, and mistletoe, with autumn leaves dropped here and there to add a touch of color to these decorations. The same decorations were used throughout the entire house, and were especially effective over the costly hangings at the windows.

Many rare and costly books were found in the library, which was magnificent in its decorations, as was the drawing room; while the hall was especially beautiful with holly and mistletoe banked on the banisters and in every conceivable place, where the artistic eye would be pleased with the graceful effect.

Mrs. George Proctor, gowned in a white silk crepe de chine, made empire, and rare lace trimmings, and Mrs. Will Robb, wearing white Lille silk, empire effect, with imported lace trimmings, and Mrs. Brazzell, gowned in blue directoire satin, with fringe trimmings and rare old lace received their guests in the hall.

Misses Ella Pendleton, gowned in pink messaline; Mabel Shipp, in pink directoire silk and Katherine Robb, in pink chiffon over pink silk, presided over the punch table, which stood amid a bower of mistletoe, holly and autumn leaves, beneath the stairway, in the hall.

The hostesses were assisted in the dispensing of hospitalities by Mrs. J. Ogden Crutcher, gowned in blue pompadour chiffon over blue messaline. There were many handsome gowns to add beauty to the scene. The guests played until a very late hour, when a most enjoyable meat course was served.

Among those present were: Mesdames John Davis, Rufus Lisle, J. H. MacNeill, Bruce Duty, George Kohlbas, Henry Thomson, Harry Strother, Hart Robinson, Thomas Robinson, Byrd Hodgkin, O. R. Venable, J. Smith Hays, Tom Bradley, A. R. Baldwin, Lee Baldwin, M. T. McDowney, Floyd Day, Frank Johnson, Ol Evans, Lucien Beckner, William Massie, George Clark, George Tomlinson, Roll Ratliff, J. SPIRITUAL IDLENESS

Two Additions Made at First Baptist Church—House is Crowded.

There were two additions at the revival services at the First Baptist Church Tuesday night. The church was again crowded in spite of the rainy evening. There will be a meeting again Wednesday night and every evening during the week. Dr. Porter, of Lexington, spoke on the subject, "Spiritual Idleness." Dr. Porter's text was: "Why Stand Ye All the Day Idle?" Mt. 20:6. He said in part:

The condition of those who are not Christians, is described, as that of idleness. The unregenerate occupies the same relation to the spiritual world, as the tramp does to the industrial world. Religion ought to be the business of life, and not a portion, or a pastime of life. One frequently says, "I must make a living," but it is equally true, that we must make a dying.

My First Duty.

My first duty is to my Maker, and if I then have any time left to make a living, I can spend my time to this end. God pity us, if our highest ambition, is to make a living. A dog makes a living, and even a bird gets on in the world. Surely we have not lowered the dignity of our mission to that of the lower animal.

Buying and building should not be the chief end of living. We consume much of our time, in discussing "hard times," when as a matter of fact, our hearts are much harder than the times. We shudder at the horrors of famine, but the horrors of prosperity are far more to be dreaded. Central Kentucky has suffered far more from prosperity, than it has ever suffered from adversity. Many a man expects to gain wealth by dishonest means, and then play the philanthropist, to atone for his meanness.

Breaks Sandwich in Half.

Sometime since, I saw a little boot-black break his sandwich in half, and give it to another hungry boot-black. That boy was as great philanthropist as Andrew Carnegie. The lonely mountain preacher, half starved, toiling without murmur in the mountains, is a real philanthropist, though the religious journals may not write of the fact. Like Edwin Markham's "Man With the Hoe," our gaze is upon the earth, instead of being above.

It is only for a day, that our life shall last.

"A peevish April day
A little sun, a little rain,
And then night sweeps along the plain,
And all things pass away."

Whether we praise God or curse Him, our day shall soon have an end. The spade has already been purchased, that shall dig the graves of some of this congregation. Death shall soon serve a writ of ejectment, we shall move out of homes, and on to the cemetery. Death is God's police officer to keep the world straight.

Easiest Thing to Die.

The easiest thing, that a Christian will ever have to do, is to die. A man was once asked when near death, if he desired a prayer made for him, to which he replied, "No, I have attended to that, and now I have nothing to do, but to die." Nothing but to cross the river of death, on the bridge of faith, leaning on the everlasting arms, and with halleluiah on the lips and hosannas in the heart, to sweep through the gates of glory, into the city, whose builder and maker is God.

Asks Reason For Idleness

God asks the reason for our idleness. I challenge anyone here, to write out your reasons for not being a Christian, and then swear, that to the best of your knowledge and belief, they are sufficient reasons for not serving God. Were you to do it, your best friend would say, "False fleeing perjured Clarence. You cannot say that you have not been invited. Lips have invited you to Christ, which have long since crumbled to dust. You may meet at judgment, unanswered prayers, that have been made for you, by those who loved you most. For my own part I would rather face a thousand cannon, than the unanswered prayer of father or mother.

Christ Loves You.

Christ loves you, and his blood will cleanse you from all sin. The story is told of a wife, who on account of unkindness, left her husband, and returned to her father's home. In unpacking her trunk, she found the little red shoes of her buried babe. They brought to her memory the buried child and her buried love for her husband. She requested her husband to come and talk with her. He came, and upon entering the room, saw the little red shoes. Anger died, love revived, and they were reconciled. So through the blood of Jesus Christ we are reconciled to God.

Some Are Deterred.

Some are deterred from entering the vineyard believing that the work would be too great. The work is great, but God is greater. Many are afraid that they cannot "hold out."

There is a vast difference between holding Christ's hand, and allowing him to hold my hand. Sin is mighty, but thank God, it is not Almighty. If religion is your work, you will lose it, if it is God's work, he will take care of it. God may not lighten the burden, but he will strengthen the back to bear it.

Some defer, saying, "It is easy to accept Christ at anytime." It will never again, be as easy as it is tonight. See that you might break with your finger, will soon support your weight. A sinner grows in sin, just as a Christian grows in grace.

Accept Him As He is.

If you ever accept Christ, you must accept him, as he is, and just as you are. A man once said, that it took him fifty years to learn three things—that he could not save himself, that Christ did not wish him to, and that Christ had already saved him, if he would only believe it. An orphan boy, upon being asked, when seeking admission to an orphan's home, what recommendation he had, pointed to his rags. Your very sins commend you to the Saviour, for he came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Your deeds will neither save or damn you, for you are already condemned because you have not believed in the Lord Jesus Christ. It was hard for Christ, that it might be easy for you. Lift your eyes, to the everlasting hills, from whence cometh all your help.

We Are Workers.

We are workers. The dust flies about us while we wrestle with ourselves, with our instrument, our aim. It often happens that the dust is so thick that we do not perceive the goal. No matter, if we but suspect it. The fight is always so fierce, the drudgery so dull that we tire toward evening. No matter—we go to sleep and begin all over again in the morning.—Holger Drachmann.
